

ShwayFit

Your clients, sessions, and plans in one place.

A practical first version for your training business

ShwayFit is a proposed phone-first web app to help you manage the day-to-day work around personal training. The goal is less time keeping separate records and more time focused on your clients. It will also work on your laptop.

What you will be able to do

Plan your day. Book, reschedule, and cancel sessions in a clear calendar.

Keep clients organized. Manage contact details, goals, notes, and appointment history.

Track session balances. Record purchased packages and see sessions used and remaining.

Manage workout plans. Keep each client's exercises and training instructions together.

Record progress. Review dated notes and measurements; no photo uploads in this version.

Send email reminders. Automatically remind clients of upcoming appointments.

A small pilot, built around your feedback

The first proof of concept (POC) is for you as the trainer. Clients will not need an account to receive reminder emails. Your business records will be separate from those of other independent trainers if the app expands.

Scope and cost

We aim to keep pilot running costs minimal, using free service allowances where possible; zero cost is not guaranteed. Email reminders are planned through Resend. SMS, progress photos, payments, and a client-facing app are deferred. A launch date and any development fee are not set by this proposal.

What we would like your feedback on

Does this cover your daily workflow? What should happen for cancellations or no-shows, and when should reminders arrive? If the direction feels useful, the BRD provides the detailed requirements for review.
